The School was inspected in January of 2016 under the new more challenging framework. The overall judgement was one of 'requires improvement' meaning that the school is not yet securely good under the new framework. The feedback given from the inspectors was that Aylestone is a school very much on the 'cusp' of securely good at this time and with some tightening up and consistency brought to some areas then the school will continue to go from strength to strength. The inspectors were pleased that the school had already identified the areas for improvement and were already working on them, but in some cases the impact seen was in its infancy. In short, Aylestone is a lovely school and a really nice place to be in. This is a really exciting time to join the school, where the successful candidate can really have a big impact and be part of something special.

The inspectors made many very positive comments, these include:

- "Pupils are well cared for as a result of the schools nurturing ethos. Pupils, parents and staff value this. As a result, excellent relationships are the norm and children feel safe. Pupils' conduct around the school is generally good"
- "Some highly effective practice in learning, teaching and assessment exists"
- "Leadership and management are improving under the guidance of the newly appointed executive headteacher"
- "Pupils are well prepared for life in modern Britain and the school provides for their spiritual, moral, social and cultural development effectively"

Ofsted conducted monitoring visit in October 2016, the main findings included:

- The headteacher is driving improvement by raising the expectations and ambition of staff and pupils.
- Many initiatives are now being undertaken to share the best practice in teaching, learning and assessment that is available across subjects.

Safeguarding, and the way in which we work hard to keep children safe has also been highlighted as a strength of the school. The school's work to keep pupils safe and secure is good.

We continue to be focused on helping pupils to achieve the best grade they can. This is through a combination of high quality teaching, extensive support and intervention (in collaboration with Heads of Year - known as Achievement Coordinators), and regular communication of progress with parents.

Personal Development and welfare was judged as good. Safeguarding, and the way in which we work hard to keep children safe has also been highlighted as strength of the school. The school's work to keep pupils safe and secure is good.
